At the start the market was weak, Sept. being off the to the at 62sc to the Prices at Laverpool showed asses. The most important factor in the initial weakness here was that the weather throughout the United States continued extremely favorable for the new crop. Nevertheless sentiment in the wheat pit soon became builts. The chief causes for the change in feeling were numerous reports from Minneapolis telling of the condition of the spring-sown crop in the Dakotas and dinnessta. Although the advices were conflicting, the majority seemed favorable to the buils. As a result prices made a quick upturn, shorts buying freely on the possibility of damage to the spring crop. The fact that receipts today at St. Louis were smaller than the previous two days helped to increase bullish sentiment. after the opening. At the start the mar-

SUMMARY OF ST. LOUIS MARKETS

Bulls continued to follow up their advantage in yesterday's market, an esult was a very good gain in the prices of the entire wheat options. The farmers all over the Southwest cut considerable figure in the speculative situation. They refused to sell their grain at the prevailing prices, and offerings were so small that the professionals saw the necessity of establishing higher values. Weather conditions also were bullish, though there were prospects of rain in some sections. Reports from Kansas indicated that it was too hot and dry for the good of the crop, and there was more talk of rust damage in the Northwest. This latter indication, though, had little effect on the day's trading. The real strong influence was the excellent cash situation. At this season spot values are always regarded as an index. Elevators were good buyers in the open market, and there was said to be an unusually good milling and shipping demand in the Southwest. Toward the end of the session the shorts were more than anxious to cover, and the buying in the last hour was risk, the net gain for the day being around 2c a bu. Corn showed considerable strength. In this market also the cash demand was the rincipal bullish factor. July closed with a fair advance.
